Maggie Scotilla is a pen and ink artist living in State College, Pennsylvania who found herself returning to drawing after a twenty-year break. Originally attending art school, she switched focus to psychology and earned a master's in counseling for fear of not being "good enough" for the art world. Maggie has been drawing with pen and ink for about three years now but feels it is her true passion. She focuses her work on animals and nature, sometimes drawing from real subject matter and sometimes from imagination. She has had entries in several local shows and galleries, including the Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts Images Exhibition, as well as participating in a large-scale wood carving/printmaking event called Big Ink. Maggie is continuing to expand her artistic skills into digital art and illustration and design.
